Tim O'Connell

Tim grew up in England but has worked and lived outside the UK since 1994. Most of this time he has been based in Switzerland working for multinational organizations in a variety of corporate and business global management functions. Tim has also spent several years in Hong Kong and Brussels, overseeing regional or global management responsibilities and as such is very adapted to international and multi-cultural environments.

In addition to his corporate experience he spent three years in management consulting where his clients included some of the largest global organizations.

Having experienced the good, the bad and the ugly of leadership, it was his desire to find a new way of leading organizations that led Tim to set up his own coaching practice three years ago. Tim's belief is that the key to finding sustainable solutions to the internal and external challenges that organizations face collectively is to first work on the individual level with those who create and influence the prevailing culture. In particular, as an executive coach he desires to help them develop the capabilities needed to thrive in the 21st Century both as individuals and as leaders of flourishing organisations.

In his coaching, Tim combines a practical problem-solving approach infused with aspects of psychology, philosophy, and the latest research and thinking on new forms of leadership.

Tim's work has led him to form several collaborations around the world with others who share the same goal of helping leaders define and create a more significant and successful role for their organizations to play in the world.
